African Mosaic: Political, Social, Economic and Technological Development in the New Millennium E. Ike Udogu

'The African Mosaic: Political, Social, Economic and Technological Development in the Millennium', is essential reading for all students of Africa, its people, society and its future. In this collection Zack-Williams and Udogu have put together an invaluable collection of essays by both Africans and non-Africans dealing with some of the most pressing issues facing Africa in the new millennium. These include: democracy and development; elections and the democratisation process in Africa; human rights and ethnicity; corruption; education policy; health systems; gender and migration; and, information communication and technology. The volume is equally suitable for undergraduates and postgraduates, as well as those policy makers and those-working in the NGO sectors specialising in political science, development, sociology, history, anthropology, education and technology.
