Some thought Shelly, the pretty, young widow, was becoming a homebody after the death of her husband but they didn't know the passion for adventure in her heart that was urging her into a whole new, unknown territory. Her husband's motorcycles were still parked in the garage and she kept wondering what it would be like to learn to ride; to lean into the curves with abandon as she travelled the winding country roads. She engages an old friend to help her learn but discovers a terrible secret that threatens to polarize her again. However, her mind has been made up and Shelly is determined to see her dream through. But when she discovers her attractive teacher is involved in the mystery, issues of trust and forgiveness threaten their friendship especially when a past love re-surfaces to reclaim a place in their lives. This Christian love story is spiced with mystery, adventure, intrigue and romance--all the ingredients for an entertaining and exciting novel.
